Subject: : Stream Reports
Topic: : Yellow Breeches, Cumberland Co, 2/21/2002
Yellow Breeches, Cumberland Co, 2/21/2002
Author: : 1wt
Date: : 2012/2/22 0:43:55
URL:

I fished the Yellow Breeches today from 3pm until 6pm. The water is perfect. Low and crystal clear, I didn't have a thermometer so it was about the same as FI's temp yesterday.
I also saw lots of midges. They looked like they had a blue wing, so maybe BWO's about size 28?
I caught two browns, two bows, one creek chub, and a small brook trout. Someone else posted a brookie yesterday..... but I thought he was mistaken! I'm so glad they put some brook trout in the YB, my fave trout.
I started with a micro bugger, but soon changed to a tandem of two black Zebra midges size 20 under a strike indicator.
Again, I used a 3wt Helios. Wow!! what a wonderful super lite performance rod!
When I posted my last report, I used photobucket and a member here e-mailed me about a pic number 100 I took last year? I went to photobucket and changed things and now I can't post a single pic!! LOL Maybe it's God's way to show me not to spot burn?
Fishidiot, could you please give me a couple "simple" instructions of how to post pix on this site without using photobucket?
Another wonderful day fly fishing.
My waders still leak, so I just ordered some new ones..... and a wading staff. Cold water and wet feet isn't comfy for mid Feb!! and I'm so tired of slipping on the frozen muddy banks!

Longrods Forever,
1 wt