Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing
Topic: : Susquehanna, nice day but no fish!
Re: Susquehanna, nice day but no fish!
Author: : Woolybugger
Date: : 2008/1/17 18:39:06
URL:

Wow! a warmwater post!

Last year, 07', was the worst yet for me in the Susquehanna. Like you guys I fish Wrightsville to above Harrisburg..... Marysville and Perdix.

07' was near record shallow and near record hot! Ever since 03' I have seen the massive fish kills and the massive YOY gasping for oxygen on the surface. Last year, first time ever, was lots of green snotgrass every time the water level shifted a bit.

If we get some rain this year, things just might improve. I'm optimistic..... even last year the fallfish were "thick as thieves" and I caught a few small bass..... that weren't supposed to be there.

This year I'm going to give it a better attempt. Upstream all the way to New York..... and Lake Erie.

Fly fishing is what I do. I can't let this Global Warming wreck my passion in life. I just have to move upstream..... maybe all the way to Canada. LOL I could live in Canada. The only prob is it takes $1.72 US dollars to buy 1 Canadian dollar. All my possessions are only worth half of what they once were. Really a shame but my country, the US, has dropped to a third world status!!

But I could be happy with lots of fish around. Even if the Chinooks laughed at me, I could still get the free socialized health care. They live a few years longer than we do in the US, so that would be good.