Hey some streambed geology! I do this stuff all the time, too bad it's down in the dead zone of Greene/Washington county. Geology is super interesting paired with trout fishing. Obviously the quartzite/sandstone discussed but things like shale bottoms too and the wonder of limestone streams! Thanks for the geo posts guys!

As for trespassing when blue lining it's always in the back of my head. I like others try to pick some trash up and stay as courteous as possible. I've only had one run in with a landowner and it was honestly my fault and I was super apologetic. She let me go and then on the walk out I passed her house on the road and she stopped me to ask how the fishing was and if the fish looked good. There's some great streams down in Ligonier area I want to try but it's alllll private down there so I've avoided it.
