
Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Outer Banks/ Flies

Re: Outer Banks/ Flies

Author: : tomgamber

Date: : 2006/10/27 23:03:49

URL:

<http://www.branhamssaltwaterflytying. ... ying/patterns/default.asp>

http://oregoninlet.us/flyfishing/topic.asp?TOPIC_ID=243

http://oregoninlet.us/flyfishing/topic.asp?TOPIC_ID=2190

http://oregoninlet.us/flyfishing/topic.asp?TOPIC_ID=3

Here are my favorite links to outer banks FFing info. Go to the forum on the website of the last three links and you can keep track of whats going on, right up until the day you leave. The posters are real great and helpful, or at least they were for me last year.

But yeah, what someone said earlier, Clousers and Deceivers and half and halves ...check on that site for color combinations as you get closer. But Brian Horsley who runs the charter...and runs the site should be able to help. I didn't catch a lot last year but it was more from lack of time and effort then anything else. Ended up fishing from the beach (near the family) with spinning gear and catching just about anything you could think of. Good luck.

One more thing...maybe its how I tie or how they tie but I noticed that their flies seem o be tied more sparsely that than regular Clousers. Go thin with the bucktail or ultra hair...