Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations
Topic: : Relocating to Lewistown
Re: Relocating to Lewistown
Author: : jeremymcon
Date: : 2013/7/28 21:03:29
URL:

Quote:

> teacreekfreak wrote:
> its mountain bike season for me now, but you dont have to go anywhere other than kish, honey and tea creek when during fly season. Tea Creek and the best part of Honey Creek are in Reedsville. 5 or 10 mins from lewistown. Honey creek fishes best from the cave (alexanders caverns) downstream and does hold some brookies in the headwaters in new lancaster valley like a previous poster added. All browns from the cave downstream. If those three get boring head to penns...which never gets boring. Outdoor recreation is endless here, thats why i stuck around.....oh yeah and the wilderness bar in new lancaster valley.... wing nite wednesdays and thursdays the best around, you can get clams and tacos on thursdays too, cheap booze, middle of nowhere too.....Enjoy!!!

Sweet! Tea creek must be good if you chose it as your username. Lol. I knew there was going to be a lot of great fishing in the area, but every time I hear more about it I just get more and more excited about the move. I'm definitely checking out the wilderness bar too.

@lv2nymph : when I get settled in in Lewistown I'll pm you, and we'll try to get out. I've told other people on the forum I'd fish with them before, but I really believe I'll have time now that school's over. Lol. We'll see.