I'm truly 'hooked' on saltwater fishing and can't to get out another time. The only downside if there is one is the constant cleaning of gear to keep the saltwater off.

Every day when I got home from the salt, I'd just rinse everything off in the outside shower. When I left permanently, I just took the reels into the shower with me and broke 'em apart and got them good and wet.

I meant to grease them up, but never bothered. I figure as long as I get them before I go out again next year.

Fishing in saltwater is a real change of pace, isn't it? I've become a huge fan even though I barely caught a thing on my own vacation.
