

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Little J No More

Re: Little J No More

Author: : FarmerDave

Date: : 2007/5/10 8:29:03

URL:

Quote:

salvelinusfontinalis wrote:

ok not to get into a pissing battle but that is the biggest load i have ever read.....i hope im not alone!

Quote:

Partially, I am tired of wading such difficult water - I'm not getting any younger. Partially, I am tired of too much company - I miss the days when I always had 'my' pools to myself and I could spend a whole summer figuring them out - or not.

Quote:

So I don't fish the Little J anymore. I wish it well, but I'll put my time in on other water. And I worry about the health of a river where it all becomes a game (I've fished others like this). It's not a game - it's a blood sport, with all of those implications for all of us, including the fish.

well if your your not part of the solution your part of the problem. you leaving the little j will help over crowded conditions.

Quote:

And there is nothing as good to eat as a wild trout, which is why (really) we all fish in the first place.

this is NOT why i fish. while i agree that it makes me feel part of the natural world, I HATE THE TASTE OF TROUT....wild, holdover or fresh stock. i fish because it brings me peace. i can lose track of time....the world seems to stand still while im out there. because i love seeing a turtle, a bear, a deer....or anything in the REAL world.beacuse it doesnt matter whats pissin me off in life, my job, family or bills.....fishin makes it all go away while my lines in the water. i donot fish to eat.....not when i have an entire isle at the grocery store dedecaded to just chips.

look im not saying the occasional harvest of a wild trout is wrong or bad. i dont do it....never will. just dont label me in YOUR book. we all dont "really" fish to eat. thats NOT why i do it.

Well sal, I think some of it is a load, but I don't think all of it is. I fish for the same reasons as you. I also hunt for the same reasons. But I also understand these is a blood sports. Without them, it is just a walk in the woods (which I also enjoy for the same reasons).

As far as how trout taste? I don't agree with that part either, but it didn't offend me at all. I'd rather have a hamburger, but i wouldn't want one everyday. 🍔