Troutbert,

I for one am less interested in groups and more interested in laws. Individuals broke the law, and in that act, terminated protected species, this is wrong.

I'm not interested in groups either. And that was the point that I was trying to make, in an ironic way.

Poaching is not done by "religious groups" at all. No religious group has a religious practice of poaching. Poaching is done by INDIVIDUALS.

So it's Bob or John or Robert or Ed or whoever that is poaching, not a "religious" group. The person doing the crime may be a MEMBER of a particular religious or ethnic group, but it's still that person or persons doing the crime, not the group as a whole.

The great majority of Mennonites would very strongly disapprove of something like that. If in fact some Mennonite(s) did that, then they were probably rowdy kids, which occur in all religious and cultural groups. And their parents would surely come down hard on them if they ever get caught.

Re: Do they know it's against the law? Yes, of course. Everyone knows that.
