

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Calling salt "fin"attics

Re: Calling salt "fin"attics

Author: : acristickid

Date: : 2009/11/15 18:06:30

URL:

Dang- this saltwater fly fishing stuff is crazy!

Seems to go on forever. I have so much to look forward too!

The more I find out from the board, books from the library,dvds, etc... the less I know!

More questions-

Let's assume these questions are related to wading the Jersey Shore or close by.

How do you use the tides? Falling or rising? Moon? What are ideal conditions? How about winds?- blowing in I would think would help.

Again, I understand some of these questions could be very specific to certain locations- but figured I would try anyway.Realize libraries of books have been written on these subject but figured- what the heck.

Most times- like when I visit Florida- it did'nt really matter anyway because I just fished all day, everyday.

For saltwater- what is important about the length of the rod? I see some are 9ft and some are 13ft and those are the same weight rod? I can understand the trout rods but not 100% about salt rods.

Reverting back to approaching journeyman.

FI- ha, once when I was a kid I took a big boat (just drift in the current with 40 others on the boat) about a mile off West Palm and my dad caught a "bonito". And as soon as it was brought a board- one of the deck hands came over and unhooked it and threw it back before we even got a good look at it. . Said to us- "Can't eata bonita."