I just picked up some DT line and its fills the reel up pretty close to being too full. Once line is let out its fine but you have to be careful its brought in neatly to fit without rubbing the top of the reel.

I do no have much backing on. But is it possible to trim some of the fly line so it fits better?

Other then that it casts great!

If you can't pull enough backing, split your DT in half. Same benefit of just turning it backwards after a year or three.
