

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Fixing Waders

Re: Fixing Waders

Author: : jaybo41

Date: : 2007/6/5 23:40:19

URL:

I fixed a couple of pair of waders that had pin holes in the seams in the leg/crotch area. Not enough for heavy leakage, but just a little. It became more annoying than anything. Aquaseal did the trick. Make sure you put a couple of layers on it and go out 3/4 of an inch from the seam if that's where they are.

Before you get there though, you may want to consider the flashlight test to isolate the leak. Take a flashlight and your waders and go to your basement or somewhere dark. Put the light in the waders and run it along or near the suspected area. When you see light, you found your leak :)