

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Calling salt "fin"attics

Re: Calling salt "fin"attics

Author: : FlySwatter

Date: : 2009/12/5 9:37:43

URL:

A-kid,

Too funny! My parents and brother live in North Naples baetween the Pavillion and 100 Ave. North. I probably saw you there back in '90.

I caught a small snook and a few lady fosh casting EP Minnows behind the Vanderbilt Inn this past August at sun-up.

If you're on foot, fishing the beaches near passes on an outgoing tide can be good. It's a little like fishning a big river. The bait (and gamefish) stack up in the slack water near the current breaks.

If you're going in the winter, daytime can be good for reds and trout out of a 'yak. Explore the flats adjacent to deeper channels. The big snook are mostly in deep, off shore water, but the smaller snook head into the freshwater creeks. Both are temp sensitive and seek thermal refuge: warmer water, the opposite of trout here in PA.

Good luck!

- Mike