Great trip.

Pcray covered saturday morning. I hooked a good number at sterretania, but landed fewer than I would have wished. Overall, I ended up with 7 or 8 landed. As was mentioned earlier, I was having greatest success with peach. Angora sucker spawn was the best variation.

Today saw lower and clear conditions, as well as some cold temps. The fish were definitely less active. We started below the legion, and it was a mob scene. We hooked a few before deciding to check walnut out... mainly because it beat going home. We caught a handful there, but it was packed with people, and the fish were on high alert with the low conditions. Once the wind picked up, we decided to make the trek back. Looks like the east side would have been better, based on troutslammer's post. We didn't feel like adding any more time to our already long drive, so we decided against checking that area out. Live and learn.

I'm tired, but I'll get the pics up tomorrow.

Great to see everyone.
