"hollow tube slid down over line and fly and push the hook back to unhook the fish.....is this how ketchum release works?"

Your description pretty much sums it up. The tube on the end of the Ketchum has a slit in it so you can slip it onto the tippet and then slide it down to get the fly out. I've used hemostats as well as the Ketchum and the Ketchum seems to be easier to use. I have read posters on other boards who have nothing good to say about the Ketchum, but as I've said, it works for me.
