

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : WINDMILLS II

Re: WINDMILLS II

Author: : bikerfish

Date: : 2009/12/23 9:18:25

URL:

I've seen them along rt160, which happens to be a great motorcycle rd and my favorite way down into md/wv areas. I think they're kinda neat, and having them on strip mine land makes perfect sense, the land was already destroyed! I also went past a place where they must make the blades, it's just past kostas plaza near ebensburg, on the road that goes towards blue knob. the blades where lying packed up in the parking lot, they were HUGE!!

I kinda laugh when I hear the cry for migrating birds flying into them. these things don't spin very fast, people must think they turn like helicopter blades. while I'm no biologist, I think most birds would be able to see the blades and steer clear.

would I want one in my backyard? why not, as long as it's far enough away it wont fall on my house if it fails! in my opinion, I'd rather have a windmill than a marcellus well in my yard! and I would still be able to drink my water!!