

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Best fly box?

Re: Best fly box?

Author: : Joe

Date: : 2007/6/22 9:53:00

URL:

Thanks all! By reading the posts here I see that there is a niche in the industry for a better box. I would rather spend money on tying material and fishing itself than on $40 fly boxes. I have decided so far, to stay away from foam. I find knowing that my flies are securely in a foam box leaves me open to complacency and they come out and fall into the river when I am not looking. I also like my nymph and wet fishing separated from my dry selection. Also I like minimalist fishing. I like grabbing my rod my vest and my wading staff and running out the door. So 2 boxes, 1 for wets, 1 for dries. I do like a reserve so gonna have to go with Tim on the big Plano, good idea. I have a few of those Morrell foam boxes hands down bang for the buck they are the ticket and if you like foam they last! I have, at last decided to go with 2 Meiho boxes both for function and cost. A smaller box for my wets. A larger 14 compartment for my dries. If I need more room 12 or 13 dollars is easy to ingest.

Here is a link to Meiho boxes: <http://www.flyfishusa.com/flyboxes/meiho-boxes.htm>

Thanks again

Joe