kettle creek is a great place to expand your fly fishing expertise. hear a lot about stockies there. so. what is so wrong with catching fish. problem with kettle it is very low in summer. that is why the underground springs are a must to look for. i have seen 50 trout stacked at one of these spots. in an area of 3 ft. cubed. have fished it all. only problem now is getting my friends to fish other places rather than the leidy bridge and above. on the back road that becomes posted at the big farm. you will know when you get there, stay off grass. no parking. no fishing, do not turn around. etc. i can't remember much trash there. seems fishermen respect the lore there. always seem to take a grill, dogs, burgers, buns, mustard, kettchup, onions, and a big vat of bloody mary's on the other side of the creek. make a fire by stream and cook for 6 to 8. in my mind i am a hero there. the locals seem to accept me. seems like they expect me .

at times the header of the lake can be deadly. i mean fish all over. it is possible to catch and release 50 fish in a day at kettle creek.

in may i like the yellow adams, my version of march brown. and a green body fly.

put some deer hair wings on some. do not be afraid of the riffles. the trout are everywhere.
