A switch rod is a great tool for swinging flies for steelhead, trout and bass on medium to large streams when wading. The two-handed casting style is very relaxed and, when done correctly, almost effortless. However, I would think that while fishing from a boat or kayak a shorter rod(say, 9 foot?) would allow for more precise casting as well as making it easier to land the fish(with a 2-hander I tend to beach my larger fish). Maybe you need one of each?! Tight lines.
