RYANH I think you should read the entire article before jumping to conclusions. There are several things that are clearly FACT--> Cheney made the easing of regulations on the Klamath river a priority to aide farmers, the Klamath river salmon stocks then suffered from one of hte worst fish-kills in history and it decimated that commercial fishing industry on the west coast, we (OUR TAX DOLLARS) are currently paying for this little F--k up because we now are forced to bail out the fishing industry due to poor conservation efforts.

TOM Brings up several points about what is important to me personally. The war is important but frankly it isn't something I support at all, mainly because Iraq was poorly planned and executed; meanwhile our national debt grows and Afghanistan is getting worse. I did support our mission in Afghanistan though.

Our cities are a disaster, but that is mainly because people are abandoning them in droves to live in rural areas, which makes conservation even more of an issue. As people flock to rural areas we are going to see a continued "crunch" on natural resources like water; which will directly effect you when your favorite stream is bone dry.

It isn't bad science to conserve what little we have left.
