

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : To count or not to count- that is the question.

Re: To count or not to count- that is the question.

Author: : ryguyfi

Date: : 2010/2/11 10:24:09

URL:

I'm a counter.... don't stone me.

Being an "advanced beginner" I think most people find success in how many fish they catch when they start out. It's all part of the "progression" like in the other thread. I'm def one to stop and smell the roses though and enjoy the surroundings, but you have to catch fish when you start out to enjoy the sport, and the more fish you catch the more "enjoyable" it is at first. I think the farther you get into the sport, the catching isn't as important, because you are a better fisherman and usually plan on catching fish, and you appreciate the small nuances of the sport besides the actual catching. Once I have a day in which I catch so many fish that I can't count them, then maybe I'll advance to a "non-counting" fisherman. I've never had one of those banner days so maybe that's why I continue to count.

Ryan