

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : To count or not to count- that is the question.

Re: To count or not to count- that is the question.

Author: : salvelinusfontinalis

Date: : 2010/2/11 11:36:08

URL:

I count sometimes and sometimes i dont.

As far as how long odes it take me to move....not long.

If your fishing a stream like Spring and your having a bad day i usually stay. The stream is amazing and has a ton of fish. If im not catching them it isnt because they are not there.

When fishing small wild trout streams, i fish very very fast. Ask anyone that has fished with me, i dont spend a lot of time in one place. On a small wild trout stream your fist 2 casts are very important. If you dont catch a brookie by then.....move on. I can cover alot of mileage doing this and often catch a ton of fish.

If im fishing with someone on a stream like this....they dont see me much. I will be a mile downstream sometimes before i turn around to find them. I will however skip holes as to give them a place to toss a fly that has yet to be disturbed. When i find them again i will slow down and let them know which ones i skipped.

More first and second casts.....mean alot more fish.

If im not catching anything on a small stream it usually only takes me 30 mins to an hour to go to the next stream or section.