Anyone have any problems setting the hook with beetles? I've been catching tons of fish on beetles in the past month, but I've found that I miss hookups much more frequently with this fly than any other. I know its not a problem with my technique in setting the hook, cause I have no trouble with any of my other fly's.

I'm thinking about tying them with a 2XL hook and letting more of the hook go out the back than under the body of the fly.

Anyone else experience similar problems with them?
