For those that feel that the rule is too general:

How about if the question were changed to a proposal like LJ is making: Small access fees on all water ways to "compete" with clubs?

Is that what he was saying?

Then the answer is no.

Still too general.

It is really inconceivable if you think about it. On each stream? How would you enforce it?

If you mean another stamp that covers all wild streams? Then maybe. Great intention, but I can also see problems with that (that have already been discussed).

Think of the European model.

All I am asking is whether you are opposed to the idea of paying a private landowner for a day's access to a wild trout stream. Take a flyer and take a stance on it.
