

Subject: : Print, Video, Audio Discussions

Topic: : Rod Building Books?

Re: Rod Building Books?

Author: : TimB

Date: : 2010/3/1 14:17:05

URL:

Agree with both suggestions above. If the forum still has it's archives, that could be a good resource for you. I found answers to several questions there when I got started in rod building. Don't get caught up in some of the minutia, but just try to have fun with it. If you can tie flies, you can build rods. I usually build one almost every winter, just for a project. You could easily do it in a weekend, but I tend to drag it out for the enjoyment of it. I'll temporarily mount the guides and test cast, etc. until I get it how I want.

I found this series to be helpful also:

<http://flyanglersonline.com/begin/graphite/>