I'm not saying they don't eat them but after 50 years of fishing and watching i've never seen them eating them which i think is a pretty good indication. The ones in our local streams are not attached to rocks , they are in the eddies and slackwater and if you look close there are tons of em and they move , slowly , but they move , at some point i would think i'd have seen a fish feeding on them but i never have. The adults now that's another story.
