If a dry dropper, I just tie the dropper off either the eye or the bend of the hook. For the most part, when I fish like this I'm fishing the nymph and just using the dry as an indicator.

When using multiple nymphs, I just tie in the last tippet section with a blood knot, and leave a long tag end. The dropper goes on the tag end and the point fly goes at the end of the tippet. Even with only one nymph, I sometimes do this and use the long tag end for the weight, easier to change for non-removable shot.
