I have the opposite problem. All I have ever done is sling split shot and weighted flies around. Dry fly fishing is going to be a new ball game for me and I'm sure I will look like a fool trying.

I would have to say that ryguyfi summed it up the best for throwing weighted flies.

But you must let that line come completely tight before you sling it back up stream. If you let it come tight and then pull on it a little and then let slack in the line again and then try and cast, it will be royal mess. The key is don't let any slack in the line before you cast it.
