I have a float tube and a sit on top kayak. If you have no intention of using it on moving water I would highly recommend a float tube. Doesn't pack any smaller for transport or get any lighter to carry into (should you need to) a lake or pond. You can get them big. I have Bucks Bag "giant". Also have a regular sized one but I like the extra room. The kayak is nice but its a pain to transport without a roof rack. It covers water a lot faster but I am actually more comfortable, more secure and feel safer in the tube. You'll need a PFD anyway for either one. Just my 2 cents.
