

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Winter fishing

Re: Winter fishing

Author: : JackM

Date: : 2007/7/26 20:23:34

URL:

I used to fish every weekend of the winter regardless of temps, but last couple years I require 35 degrees or higher. The only thing I'd offer would be using slightly larger nymphs and slow them down, way down. Fish will feed, but the effort to food value calculation becomes more exacting to them. A small nymph isn't going to move them much more than an inch, whereas a size 10 stonefly or wooly bugger may get them to shift 6-8 inches.

By the way, don't you need a license to fish Fishing Creek?