There are climate records for Philly going as far back as the days of Ben Franklin, the nation's first weather man. I know 2 things the earth is getting warmer and man is contributing to it. As far as how much I'm not sure anyone knows, especially when you take into account the little ice age ended in roughly 1850 and lasted for approximately 500 years. The question is what kind of earth do we want to leave our kids? A cinder? A place where Pennsylvania has no trout streams? If we just slow down while we're driving and car pool we'll save tons of greenhouse gases. As populations expand it is much more important to have a clean planet, then when the earth only had 1 million humans.
