I was looking at those late yesterday Tom. May jump on that too. It is a bad time to have anything break. I may sacrifice my 3 wt this year and just buy a decent 5 wt. If I do that I'll have upwards of $200 for a new rod. If I want both I probably won't spend more than around $75 for it. I will probably buy a cheaper 5 wt now because my wife told me if I hit a certain number on sales this year she'd let me buy a new rod of my choice!! lol.

I appreciate all the pms. I think it's time for a new rod anyways, even if it will just turn into a back-up next year. I could definitely tell the difference of my cheap rod compared to others and after 4 years it's time for an upgrade. I'll let you guys know what I decide to do. If I do buy a new rod, then my old one will be up for grabs if anyone wants to take it and put a new seat on it and use it themselves or pass it on to someone else.

Thanks again,

Ryan
