I think I made a decision on the whole thing. I got a bunch of messages on it and appreciate all the help from everyone. I've got a new reel seat coming and plan to fix this rod and give it to a buddy of mine who is in the area for another year with the military and then probably moving. I told him he was welcome to come on the first day with me to learn to fly fish and I'm going to fix up my old rod and just give it to him. I am going to buy a new 5wt now and get my 3 wt in another month or so. Hopefully I kick butt here at work and will hit my bonus and be able to get a NICE 5wt in the fall and use the one I buy now for a backup.

Now looking at an inexpensive rod at Cabelas... should I buy the Cabela's three fork, or spend the extra $20 and get the St Croix Triumph that has a 5 year warranty? Anyone fish either of these rods before? Looking at a 9'5wt in a 4piece.
