Good to hear from you Boss, I've been tying some small clousers and also some smaller clouser swimming nymphs that are weighted so I can drop them dead next to a fish and give it a twitch and kick some mud. My best results have been to target feeding carp in that manner because it seems to get the attention of the approaching fish. After only three outings I am finding myself becoming obsessed with these critters! I've seen some giant carp in the Yough while kayak fishing for smallies in past seasons and I bet they would take you for one heck of a ride.
