Osprey,

I've fished for Redfish and agree with you and by no means should there be any offense taken. In fact, Redfish are easier to catch IMO but that's just one mans opinion. I think that one of the things that attracted me to this dark side of the flyfishing realm is the fact that I believe that if one can get fairly good and consistant at presenting the fly, hooking and landing Carp the better off that same person would be while fishing some tidal flat for feeding Redfish or any sight fishing where carefull and accurate casting is the norm. I am planning a kayak trip up to Presque Isle to try some true shallow water carp casting in the next few weeks, anyone else want to give it a try?
