I own that 7' 4wt also, and it is a good small stream rod. Will be my backup soon, but it is stiff and can really punch some line out and is good for throwing a nice bow and arrow out there. At the very least it is a good starter for small streams, or a backup.

The 6/7 wt I have also borrowed off of someone for a first time steelheader to use. It is a good starter rod/backup and will do fine for fighting steelies. If it breaks, you're not disappointed because of the price, which happens from time to time cleaning ice off the guides, slinging lead, or fighting a big fish.
