
Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Humpinator recipe

Re: Humpinator recipe

Author: : MattBoyer

Date: : 2007/8/2 20:14:53

URL:

Yeah, I've been a little slow about the tying lately. I was hoping to hit you up for a few flies on Sunday. 😁

Seriously, though, I might get some bench time in tomorrow, as I work night shift. I've been trying to order since carp season started. For some reason I don't lose as many flies when I'm chuckin' around maxima 10lb for a tippet. I should probably blast a few cougars out, though, if not you can have the beat up one in my box. 😁

They only seem to last through a couple fish, as the voracity of the attack often leaves them in tattered ruins, especially the ones that get hit before the fly hits the water. Believe me, it has 4 wheel drive and picture in a picture. It can heal the blind and make ugly chicks cute. I've heard the pope uses only the cougar when he fishes. It is the only thing known to man that can beat Chuck Norris. The best part is, very few know of it and fewer have seen it tied, and they'll never tell. Now of course, if someone had a recipe that they were willing to trade.....And to the world not exploding 🍷 😊

Boyer