troutbert - Did you ever try the green coated Dinsmore's egg shaped shot? It's easy to open, doesn't slide on the tippet as much, and can be re-used over and over. Our mutual friend Don Douple sold me on it a long time ago. He did some tests (only Don would do this) where he opened and closed the shot, and some made it to over 100 cycles.

I really like only using one split shot, if I have to use shot. The great variety of sizes of the Dinsmore shot makes that easy. Having a long string of shot reduces sensitivity, IMHO. After using the Dinsmore shot for so long, I can usually just look at the stream and know what size to choose - just use "The Force". 😊
