The non-lead water gremlin shot are no good. They are much lighter material. I believe it's tin. I don't think they even make a B size. The material is also very shiny. The result is a large, shiny object on your tippet. I have some and never want to use it.

I've seen them on the shelf, but I use the lead ones. Also, I soak my shot container in the stream and voila...when it dries the shot turns a dull gray color. I'm not sure if that will work with the tin ones though. I guess I'm considered a Neanderthal since I continue to use lead.
