Gambler,

Thanks again. Haven't done a whole lot by way of winter fishing in the past (and probably won't do a heck f a lot this year either) but stoneflys sounded like a good alternative to my usual assortment of woolybuggers. They also looked like a neat fly to tie up, though my first attempts have been lumpier than I like. The patterns using larva lace look interesting, so I think I'll give that a try as well as the more impressionistic versions.
