If you are fishing Clarks and come to one of those big, flat, slow sections and can see your fish.... here's an idea.

Try a small tandem nymph rig with a tiny weight (Pheasant tail, copper john, brassie, caddis larva or even an ant in size 16-20). The bottom in those big flats is very sandy and you don't have to worry about losing flies in the rocks. Even if the rig gets stuck for a second, I've had them swim over and pick them up off of the bottom. It's fun and nerve racking at the same time. :)
