

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Knot tying from fly line to Leader

Re: Knot tying from fly line to Leader

Author: : gfen

Date: : 2010/4/26 15:51:43

URL:

Quote:

tomgamber wrote:

I think I saw that "fairplay" stuff at the mart...I'd buy seconds online before that stuff.

It is, indeed, Fairplay. And I'll bet that's just another name for whatever their cheapest line is.

Walmart's a funny place, when you cut a deal to have them sell your stuff, they want it at a certain price, and so many units. I don't believe for a second that the stuff in the Fairplay box is going to be all that much different from the stuff in the 444 box, it just doesn't make economic sense to run so many different production lines, y'know?

So, between a factory second and the Fairplay, I'd probably go with the Fairplay. On a good rod I'm going to use alot, I'd probably be willing to err on the side of chosing a well known line than either of those.

I've taken to using the Fairplay tippet material now from Walmart. Its half the price of the SA stuff I preferred and more available. Like above, I mostly put the Fairplay on when I'm not concerned about things too much, but its good enough for me to use.