Here's a few ways and situations to fish buggers.

Fish them in all sizes and colors for fresh stockies. I was tossing a sz 14 olive bugger downstream and stripping it back ever so slightly and got a strike on almost every cast. I caught 12 fish in a little over an hour. A white bugger is also good for this situation.

Fish them in high water in large sizes and dark colors and lots of weight. Dead drift them in high water and get them deep. The fish have difficulty seeing and a big form will stand out to them.

Fish them down stream and stripping them upstream. It resembles a fleeing baitfish and can cause some very nasty strikes.

Also a small olive bugger stripped slow in the pools can produce some wary wild browns too.

But like it was said, there's hardly a wrong way to fish them. They can produce fish in many instances.
