Rod building will be my next venture. Pad, nothing better than a 21" smallie to test your craftsmanship. I'm hoping I can make bonus this month so I can start learning to tie. I'm gonna give it a shot on my own, I've self taught myself this far. If my flies end up looking like my casts I'm in trouble though. I taught myself on the little freestone streams and as soon as I get on a larger stream I'm a little lost. I only fish larger streams about twice a year so I'm in no hurry to learn. If I end up moving to MT next year I'm gonna have to learn. Oh yeah, and i think I will need something bigger than a 7 1/2" 3wt (My biggest rod). As with fly fishing my wife will probably catch on quick and will end up making me most the flies. As long as she keeps my box full I'll be happy!!!
