

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : zen moment

zen moment

Author: : notan641

Date: : 2010/5/19 20:41:39

URL:

I'm not a good fisher, but I'm getting better. I can manage 2 or 3 trout in a couple hours at Codorus, always on nymphs. I saw some sulphurs in the air last saturday evening but didn't want to give up on my nymphs. I saw some fish breaking the surface so I decided to try a dry. By the time I got a sulpher tied on and started casting I could not see my fly on the water, because of the darkness. Couldn't even see my line anymore. But I made a few casts and I heard a splash and I knew. I lifted my rod and I had a fish. Small brown, but my first on a dry this year. Anyone ever have moments like that?