

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Allen Fly Fishing

Re: Allen Fly Fishing

Author: : wetnet

Date: : 2010/5/22 11:36:10

URL:

Sounds like you've got it covered. My son has fished alot of rods. His first after his Dads Fenwick was a Targus and it had 2 tips but the rod failed and broke. They were super excellent about replacing it but my son at the time was competing for a Team USA National and they were a sponsor so I'm not sure they are as nice to the general purchaser but I truly think they are. Very nice staff!. We still have the rod and have to say we won't part with it because it's a good basic rod and it is simply pleasant to fish with. I fish with an Orvis T3 (No I don't need a Helios) and Wes has more than 1 Sage Z-Axis and Sage ZXL rods. He does loch style lake fishing with a G. Loomis.

In the future if we had a week long TU camp of a substantial size for next year, would you be interested in working out something with some rods? NE Pa Region. Can you PM me for details? I'll even buy a rod and reel. While I'm no expert my son always has friends and he teaches at multiple TU trout fishing camps where the kids want to learn. If the rod is reasonable and it's something he thinks is a good rod for the purpose he'll promote it.