In addition to making your leaders last longer, tying on tippet to the end of your leader can also help you get better drag-free drifts. However, the extra length can also make casting more challenging.

Keep practicing your casting, and you will find yourself being better able to turn over longer leaders. If you can at all, get with a casting instructor, and have him/her look at your cast. They should be able to give you some pointers to improve your form.

Also, I've heard that video taping yourself while practicing can help. While I haven't tried this as yet (I don't own a video cam), it sounds like it might be a good idea.

Good luck, and keep trying 🍀
