Hold the slack with your left hand and give a sharp raise of your rod tip. Do both of these simultaneously and make sure it is a sharp movement. The other thing you should remember is that you should delay setting the hook. I think I usually wait about a second. I have never really thought about it, I just kind of do it. Oh yeah, don't be afraid to set the hook twice. My biggest problem is hooking fish when I am fishing downstream to them. It's almost as if I have too much tension on the line when they strike.
