I think its a stupid argument that could be attached to so many things we do every day...a back way to work with less traffic that eventually get crowded too, a good restaurant that it used to be easy to get into but now you have to wait a few minutes, a bar that used to be fun but is now so packed its work to get a beer...

The thing is that there are more fly fishermen as well. Heck, according to license sales there are less fishermen overall. Can't go anywhere without seeing some fool slapping a bright orange or green line on the water.

With the internet there are no secrets. You like it when it reveals something unknown that is unjust. (think politicians) But you hate it when it puts a few more fishermen on your favorite stream. Its got an upside and a down side. You have to deal with both.
