

---

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Humpinator recipe

Re: Humpinator recipe

Author: : Dewey

Date: : 2007/8/18 22:42:24

URL:

Good Grief!

The whole point of the FAOL article was to promote flytying experimentation.

I have never seen mike's humpinator.

I imagined a cross between a humpy and a stimulator and came up with what you see posted in the story.

It works just fine.

so do the variations....though some work a bit better than others.

and there are more variations to come, I think.:

Once again, I have never seen mike's humpinator

what i posted is not a copy of his fly....it is a fly inspired by the name of his secret fly....and it, too, catches fish...though perhaps not as well as his fly. I don't know. I've never seen his fly.

and my fly is not a secret.....heck, its probably not even "my fly".

I'm sure someone else has done the same thing.

And I posted it on the web for all to see, use, or to use as a launch point for their own creative endeavors, whatever.

I wish to promote creativity and invention...not divisiveness and disention.

so , lighten up. :)

What say that now i've posted a fly that could be called a humpinator, perhaps a few other creative minds could post THEIR versions of this fly....inspired by this name?

Sound like fun?

All the best,
Dewey AKA Dave Pearson.