

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Rotary Vises

Rotary Vises

Author: : Coughlin

Date: : 2006/11/26 16:48:36

URL:

I currently have an Anvil Apex, which I like. It holds hooks from 7/0 to 32 with no problem and while not a true rotary, does turn so I can view the fly all around. But I read an article in this latest Flytyer by Mike Holt which caught my interest. Holt claims that even folks with rotarys often use them as if they were stationary and offers a couple of intriguing techniques in his article.

So my question is, While the rotarys really look neat, is there a distinct advantage to a rotary vise in tying flies and is there any significant difference between various models?

Thanks

Coughlin